Civil Undergrad Announcements – April 19th, 2019

1. Power Aggies Scholarship Opportunity

   Through the generosity of SMUD, a STEM student scholarship endowment and accompanying internship opportunity for students at UC Davis was created. We are pleased to present the inaugural offering of the Powering Aggies Scholarship to the students in your department. Additional information and the application for the scholarship opportunity can be found here. The deadline for the application is April 23, 2019 and the award will be announced on May 15th, 2019. If you have additional questions, please do not hesitate to reach out.

2. WRRC Gender Equity Internship Program

   Hello Community!

   The Women's Resources & Research Center is now accepting applications for our Gender Equity Internship Program for the 2019-2020 academic year! Please forward and share this email widely with your respective communities/listservs. 😊

   The WRRC Gender Equity Internship Program strives to provide leadership and professional skill development opportunities in an inclusive and intersectional feminist space where students can recognize their leadership potential, and where women, womxn, trans, non-binary, and gender nonconforming students can become fully empowered. We seek to empower interns to develop creative ways to address sexism, genderism, cisgenderism, and cissexism that inspire hope and offer opportunities to create change. The Gender Equity Internship Program offers student-scholars an opportunity to gain hands-on experience supporting WRRC functions, developing programs, and providing outreach presentations.

   For more information and/or to submit an application to be an intern, please visit: http://tinyurl.com/GEIP2019

   Please review the program’s requirements and deadlines thoroughly before applying. Applications are due April 30, 2019 by 11:59 PM.

   If you have any questions, please email wrrc@ucdavis.edu.

4. UC Davis HRVIP Study Seeking Participants

The UC Davis Center for Human, Robotics, Vehicle Integration and Performance is looking for research participants for a 2-hour study.

Astronauts on long-duration missions are certain to be faced with critical and complex tasks for which the crewmember has either not recently trained or has never been trained. In addition, in-flight crew hours are among the most precious of resources in human spaceflight, so onboard training efficiency is currently of prime importance. The question is how best to bring an inflight astronaut up to evaluated readiness to perform a complex and critical task.

You will complete a research task today which attempts to answer this question. This research study is evaluating differences in human performance and workload between different types of procedures for a complex-system repair task. The research is being performed to better understand the advantages and disadvantages of various technology for the evaluation of complex human-machine interfaces. This will benefit future design engineers for human-machine interfaces.

This study has been exempted by the UC Davis IRB under IRB Number: 1337940-1. You will attend a single session lasting from 1 to 2 hours, which will be scheduled to meet your calendar. If you would like to participate, or learn more information about this research...
